thanks to andrew morgan, for his unflagging good spirit and extraordinary musical mind; to munya bandyopadhyay, for her gorgeous voice and constant support; to the bandyopadhyay family, tatianna zammora, belin bello and adam tom for refuge and sustenance; and to dominic scott and salim lokley for emergency tech support. these seven songs are dedicated to my family and my friends, without whom there would be no music, and no me; to Jorge, who taught me a lot about flamenco, and many other things as well; and to mona, who inspired susurro.
 this cd was recorded, mixed & mastered during spring 2004 in london, uk by andrew morgan and produced by sacha silva and andrew morgan.

Front Cover

we see with a global eye,
 we feel with a global skin,
 we hear with a global ear.

we travel, we hear new melodies and strange rhythms, we sense other ways of thinking: nothing is foreign anymore.
 we step outside of the air-conditioned hotel;
 wandering into the back-alleys of the first, second and third worlds;
 stumbling upon a thousand culture clashes.

we hear with a global ear.

one that believes in combining traditional, undiluted musical forms -- rhythms, structures, melodies -- to create something new, something passionate, something 'catchy', 'funky' and even beautiful; without the usual safety nets for the western ear.

we've travelled enough, we've heard enough, we don't need them anymore.

one that knows that no single musical form can capture every possible emotion:
 strength, passion, sadness, joy, longing;
 but that music derives from a single source:
 creative expression shaped by tradition.

traditions to bend and shape, each strand intact but weaving new colours, new images, and new sounds.

sol y luna
 music by sacha silva. lyrics from "cancion" by federico garcia lorca, translated into hindi by sanjay and leena bharti.

por la ramas del laurel, vi dos palomas oscuras. la una era el sol, la otra la luna.
 en mi coto, dijo el sol. en mi garganta, dijo la luna.
 in the laurel branches, i spied two dark doves. the one was the sun, the other, the moon.
 little friends, i said: where lies my tomb?
 in my tail, said the sun. in my throat, said the moon.

gujarati harvest song
 traditional. music arranged by sacha silva and andrew morgan. vocals arranged by munya bandyopadhyay.

susurro
 part i: 'lullaby' music by sacha silva. lyrics by sacha silva and kumar aniket.

so great was my suffering / under the moonlight
 when i saw you bathing / under the moonlight
 so great was my suffering / under the moonlight
 i threw a spring flower / to drown in the tide
 i wished to be your slave / but you set me free
 i wished to be your slave / but you set me free
 is your desire so weak / that your chains have broken?
 then why am i still / imprisoned by your passion?

part iii: 'wedding song' music by sacha silva. vocals arranged by munya bandyopadhyay.

sun still below the horizon music by sacha silva and andrew morgan. lunch by tatianna and belin.
 epilogue
 music by sacha silva. excerpt from "vaishnava janto", traditional.
